

By John Poullice, The World's Only Polling Expert

Sadly, the poll of English voters, carried out by YouGuff, on behalf of a bunch of so-called "academics" (they wouldn't let me join their gravy train) has destroyed the entire basis of the NoBloodyThanks! ThereShouldBeNoBloody HaggisInAFullEnglish Breakfast campaign.

Not a single English voter objected to Scotlandshire including haggis, square sausage, or tatties scones for their early morning repast, so the U-KOK suggestion that the Natz were fuelling cross-border divisions seems to have had no effect.

Worse still, they also reject other key components of the BetterTogetherWithEcclesCakes manifesto.

When, inevitably, there is a NO vote they endorsed the idea that "The Scottish Parliament should be given control over the majority of taxes raised in Scotland, and decide its own policies on welfare benefits" by 62% to 38% - a position that Scots themselves take. This potentially drives a deep wedge between the English and their political parties who are too scared to go anywhere near that position, The inevitable consequence is that 62% of the English electorate will vote SNP in 2015, thus sabotaging the rUK.

Further, 62% feel that "Scottish MPs should be prevented on ^[1] voting on laws that apply only in England". This is a position strongly condemned by the Unionist parties in Scotland, who pretend that they are actually "equal partners" in the Union, and thus are entitled to tell the English how to run their own affairs.

However, the extensive polling in Scotland on the issue of MPs from that province voting on English matters was more succinctly distilled in a single comment from Mr Dugald McNaught from Inversneckie: "Eh? Couldnae gie a shite."

However, I must caution people against placing too much credence on this poll, for 2 reasons -

1. They didn't ask me to make up the questions
2. The respondents are clearly mindless idiots.
