

By Helmut D Nyer, our Labour Revisionism Correspondent

A Labour parliamentary candidate who had refused to accept a donation of £1000 from Tony Blair has been told she must accept the cash.

The former prime minister pledged £106,000 to help the party campaign in 106 key battleground seats, but Lesley Brennan who is standing in Dundee East decided to decline the offer.

She was then instructed by Labour's central office in London that the offer was not optional and that she must accept the donation and use it to support her campaign.

In a letter to all 106 candidates, Mr Blair wrote: "I am writing to wish you every success in your efforts to be elected and also to make a donation to your campaign. At some point in the future, or perhaps never, I may ask a favour of you – and I expect you to reciprocate instantly and without hesitation or thought."

Labour

Lesley Brennan

Help me get this bastard jailed

If you elect me as your MP in May, you can devote my time in Westminster to ensuring Tony Blair is charged and convicted of war crimes in the Hague. Like you I am fed up seeing this acquisitive, lying, murdering con man coining it in and walking free.

Related Articles

Russia Today : 'Instinct': Labour candidate rejects Tony Blair's £1K election donation

Comments

Due to the huge number of complaints, comments are no longer banned on BBC Scotlandshire News pages.

{comment}